

Bennet Lientz is a Professor in the Anderson Graduate School of Management, University of California, Los Angeles. Prof Lientz has been consulting, teaching, and doing applied research in a number of areas of business and information systems for the past 30 years, including strategic systems planning, change management, logistics, project management, E-Business, IT planning, system integration and implementation of ERP systems, outsourcing, service level management, retailing, distribution, and process improvement for 30 years. He has successfully carried out over 200 major consulting assignments in over 40 countries for agencies and companies in a variety of industries including: banking, government, medical services, agriculture, logistics, energy, natural resources, manufacturing, software, retailing, distribution, transportation, construction and engineering, finance, insurance, high technology, communications and networking, electronic commerce, trading, shipping, utilities, and other areas. He has conducted seminars and classes in strategic IT planning, change management, project management, E-Business, process improvement, system implementation, planning, and other areas to over 18,000 people in 35 countries. He is the author or co-author of over 35 books and over 75 articles in the above areas. He is the creator of the management critical path.