

Edward Huizenga is an economist and works as a Strategy and Business Development consultant with Altuition bv. Altuition is a management consultancy firm specialized in tracing and developing business opportunities inspired by information and communication technology (ICT). Edward Huizenga studied economics and business administration at Maastricht University and the University of Zaragoza, Spain. Before joining Altuition in 1998, he worked as a business research fellow at MERIT, where he conducted a PhD project on innovation management in the ICT sector, for the Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research (NWO). His management interests are in the areas of strategic management, organization of product and process development, and knowledge management practices.