

Frank M Hull teaches courses at Fordham University in New York City on strategic management of innovation and technology and business strategy. He has been the principal investigator for research grants from the NSF, the US Army/Navy, and consortia of major corporations. He directs the Strategy Research Institute, which maintains the Comparative Organization Data Archive with over 70 studies from eight countries. Over 50 companies subscribe to the Institute to exploit its research base and share best practices with one another as participants in user groups.