

About the Author

Dr. Yip is currently employed as an Associate Professor in Economics at the Nanyang Technological University in Singapore. He was born in China and grew up in Hong Kong. He obtained his first degree from the University of Hong Kong, and his Master and Ph.D. degrees from the London School of Economics. He gained extensive central banking, financial and commercial experiences through senior positions with the Hong Kong Monetary Authority, the Bank of China and the Bank of East Asia. In addition to substantial publications in high-ranking economics, finance and management journals, he has made numerous important exchange rate and macroeconomic policy recommendations in China, Hong Kong and Singapore.

In particular, Dr. Yip is the original proponent of China's exchange rate system reform. His policy articles have also made substantial impacts on China's banking reform, choice of maintaining a trade surplus to finance outward investment, gradual squeezing of the stock market bubble before the global financial tsunami, use of ultra expansionary fiscal policy and substantial quantity easing to offset the impacts of the global financial tsunami, plan of using substantial public housing supply as a long-term solution of its property inflation. Dr. Yip has also published extensively on the exchange rate systems in China, Hong Kong and Singapore. In 2010–2011, he was selected as one of the 2000 intellectuals in the 21st Century by the International Biographical Centre and member of the Presidential Who's Who in the World by Marguis Who's Who.
