

Ting Zhang is a winner of the 2006–2007 Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation Entrepreneurship Dissertation Fellowship, a winner of the finalist title for the 22nd Competition for the Charles M Tiebout Prize in Regional Science, a winner of the 2004 Student Paper Competition hosted by Virginia Department of Transportation, and has a few other awards and distinctions. Her research and publications are mainly interdisciplinary with focuses on aging population, entrepreneurship, economic growth, and regional economics. She has conducted intensive research at George Mason University, the World Bank, the Urban Institute, the Maryland Office of New Americans, and the Council of Graduate Schools. Prior to this, she had taught for two consecutive years at the University of Maryland. She holds a PhD in Public Policy from George Mason University and an MA in Intercultural Communication from the University of Maryland. She obtained her Bachelor degree from East China Normal University in Shanghai, China.