

Contents

Preface		v
Chapter 1	The “Information Industry” Converting the “Change” into a “Chance”
	Dealing with changing times, and 7-Eleven Japan’s continuing self-reformations	1
	Establishment of a business creed to meet social change	4
	Converting “problems” into “opportunities”	6
	7-Eleven Japan becomes an “information industry”	7
	Using the improvement of information technology to perform self-reformations	8
	A subsidiary company whose business performance has exceeded its two parent companies	9
	Definition of a convenience store	11
Chapter 2	The Birth of “Item-by-Item Management” and the Integrated Information System
	The “item-by-item management” system of 7-Eleven Japan	13
	Synergistic effects generated by the information system	14

Rationalization efforts made before the introduction of the integrated information system	16
Introduction of “Terminal Seven”	17
First integrated information system enables the expansion of multiple stores	20
Transforming “disadvantageous changes” into advantages	21
The second integrated information system available for marketing purposes	23
Responding to the “individualization of consumption” with graphic information analysis	27
Differentiation of product quality to cope with “intensification of intra-industry competition”	28
Two big features of the third integrated information system	30
Inter-company innovation utilizing “technological progress”	34
Cultivation of new customer bases by the information system	35
The fourth integrated information system connected by ISDN line	36

Chapter 3

Secrets of 7-Eleven Japan’s Excellent Ability in New Product Development

Quick recognition of the arrival of more “value-oriented times”	41
The lunch box, 7-Eleven Japan’s vital strategic product	42
Co-development with manufacturers with 7-Eleven Japan taking the leadership role	43
Offering a new service and expanding business	44
POS playing a central role in 7-Eleven Japan’s strategy	45

Grasping trends of “deregulation” and “new product development”	46
Selling summer products in the winter season	47
A new strategic weapon of the convenience store, the multimedia station (MMS)	48

*Chapter 4The Innovative Distribution System of 7-Eleven Japan

Distribution cost savings by using the “dominant system”	51
The distribution revolution begins with the intensified use of wholesale agents	53
Maintaining the taste and freshness of foodstuff	56
Information system supporting logistic strategy	57
Unifying the delivery of liquor and processed food	58
Establishment of a distribution base in Taiwan to unify the overseas distribution system	58

*Chapter 5Analyzing the Robustness of 7-Eleven Japan According to Personality and Organization

The management philosophy of Hirofumi Suzuki, the virtual founder of 7-Eleven Japan	61
Another information route — direct communications	64
Basic concept of independent order placement	66
Idea of “co-existence and co-prosperity” brings about robustness	67
Outsourcing prevents organizational stiffness	68
Source of strength hidden in the organization chart	69

Chapter 6*Any Blind Spots in 7-Eleven Japan's Strategy?

Why are sales of existing stores growing slowly?	73
Industry structure analysis using the Porter Business Model	75
Development of an oligopoly by three major companies	79
Opposition from existing wholesalers against the establishment of an exclusive wholesale operation company	80
Opposition from manufacturers of "fresh baked bread"	82
Business results of 7-Eleven Japan	83
Vendor of rice products suffer from low margins	85
Task of "securing a successor"	86
Is there any limit in the growth of the convenience industry?	88
Is the information system of 7-Eleven Japan perfect?	91
Environmental problems surrounding the convenience store industry	92

Chapter 7*The Fifth Integrated Information System Connecting Chain Stores Utilizing Satellite Communications

The general concept of the fifth integrated information system	95
Utilizing "animations", "still pictures" and "sound" for the construction of an attractive store with heavy-selling items and services	97
Using this new system for smooth communication with employees	98

Utilization of multimedia information for sales promotion	99
An elaborate marketing plan using a “data warehouse”	99

Chapter 8*The Convenience Store Industry Changing with the Times

Stamp and rice are now on sale at the convenience store	101
High expectations for deregulation of medical supplies	102
Making an all-out effort to obtain a liquor license	104
New trends in the relationship between gas-filling stations and convenience stores	105
Itochu Corp. becomes the largest shareholder in Family Mart	106
Expanding services by introducing home- delivery operations	108
New entrants from different categories of business	109

Chapter 9*Progress in the Unification of the Retail and Banking Sectors

Unifying cashing and shopping	111
Banking industry and convenience store co-operation with ATM installations?	112
Buying and selling dollars at the convenience store?	112
Unification of retail and banking sectors in England	113
Unification of retail and banking sectors progresses in Japan	114
Electronic money and the convenience industry	117
Survival of convenience stores in the age of electronic money	119

Bibliography	121
Postscript	123
Index	127