

Contents

Preface	xiii
Chapter 1. Condemned to Cooperate?	1
1. Introduction	1
2. Economic Interdependence, Transatlantic Cooperation, and Multilateralism	3
2.1. From economic interdependence to the Merkel Initiative	3
2.2. Economic interdependence and the case for transatlantic cooperation	8
2.3. The impact of transatlantic initiatives on the multilateral trading system, and vice versa	11
2.4. Transatlantic cooperation and cosmopolitan regulation	15
3. Contributions to this Volume	17
4. Concluding Remarks	19
References	21
Chapter 2. The Banking Crisis: Causes, Consequences and Remedies	23
1. The Basics of Banking	23
2. The Efficient Market Paradigm	25
3. Are Financial Markets Efficient?	27
3.1. Bubbles and crashes are endemic in financial markets	27
3.2. The mirage of self-regulation of financial markets	33

4. Unintended Consequences of Regulation	35
5. On Causes and Triggers	39
6. The Reaction of the Authorities	40
7. Short-term Solutions	41
8. Long-term Solutions: A Return to Narrow Banking	42
9. Conclusion	45
References	46

Chapter 3. The Political Economy of Transatlantic
Regulatory Cooperation and Competition:
A (Unofficial) View from Europe 47

1. Introduction	47
2. The New Transatlantic Economic Partnership: Hype or Hope?	49
3. New EU and a New World	52
4. Prospects for the New Transatlantic Agenda	55
5. Conclusion	60
References	61

Chapter 4. How Hard and Soft Law Interact in International Regulatory Governance:
Alternatives, Complements and Antagonists 63

1. Introduction	63
2. The Canonical Literature on International Hard and Soft Law: Their Attributes as Alternatives and their Interaction as Complements	67
2.1. Definitions of hard and soft law	68
2.2. Advantages and disadvantages of hard and soft law as alternatives	72
2.3. Hard and soft law interaction as complements	78
3. Theorizing International Hard and Soft Law Interaction: Power, Distributive Conflict and Regime Complexes	82
3.1. The EU, the US, and power in international regulatory governance	83
3.2. The challenge of distributive conflict	87

3.3. The challenge of fragmented regime conflicts . . .	93
4. Hard and Soft Law Interaction as Antagonists	96
5. Hypotheses as to the Interaction of Hard and Soft Law Instruments	111
6. Conclusions	120
References	122

Chapter 5. EU–US Regulatory Cooperation and Developing Country Trade 131

1. Trade Policies	134
2. Market Access	139
3. Non-tariff Measures	141
3.1. Other sources of trade costs	143
3.2. Services policies	147
4. Reducing Regulatory Differences and Associated Cost Differentials	151
4.1. Trade costs vs. border barriers: Gravity simulations	156
4.2. Services	157
5. Policy Implications	158
6. Concluding Remarks	161
References	161

Chapter 6. Transatlantic Trade, the Automotive Sector:
The Role of Regulation in a Global Industry,
Where We Have Been and Where We Need to go, How Far Can EU–US Cooperation go Toward Achieving Regulatory Harmonization? 165

1. Globalization	166
2. Regulating a Global Industry	167
3. Example of Disparity — Surrogates for Humans in Crash Testing	171
4. Comparison of US and EU Safety Regulations	174
5. US–EU Market Competition and Manufacturer Cooperation	175

6.	EU–US Cooperation — The Transatlantic Business Dialogue	176
6.1.	Transatlantic automotive industry conference on international regulatory harmonization	177
7.	International Harmonized Research Activities	177
7.1.	Industry petitions for functional equivalence determinations	180
8.	1998 Agreement Administered by WP.29	181
8.1.	1998 Agreement accomplishments and lessons learned	183
9.	Discussion of Several GTR Efforts, Successes and Unsuccessful Outcomes to Date	184
9.1.	Lighting installation GTR	184
9.2.	Controls and displays GTR	185
9.3.	Pedestrian protection GTR	186
9.4.	Electronic stability control (ESC) GTR	187
10.	Summary of Global Technical Regulation Experience	188
11.	An Additional Initiative: A Competitive Automotive Regulatory System for the 21st Century	190
12.	Conclusion and Recommendations to Help Achieve Vision for the Future	192
 Chapter 7. Systemic Implications of Deeper Transatlantic Convergence in Competition/Antitrust Policy		197
1.	Introduction	198
2.	The Differing Historical Origins and Orientations of Competition Policy in the US and the EU, and the Process of Convergence Thus Far	202
2.1.	The United States	203
2.2.	The European Union	207
2.3.	Recent indications of convergence: The adoption of more economics-based approaches in the EU	210

2.4.	Possible Indications of Further Convergence: Antitrust Policy in the Obama Administration . . .	214
3.	The Need for Cooperation in Principle, and the Cooperation Arrangements that Have Been Implemented Thus Far in the Transatlantic Context	216
3.1.	Rationales for cooperation in the competition policy field	216
3.2.	Existing transatlantic cooperation arrangements . .	220
3.2.1.	The 1991 US–EU Competition Cooperation Agreement	220
3.2.2.	The 1998 US–EU Positive Comity Agreement	221
3.2.3.	The Administrative Arrangement on Attendance (AAA)	221
3.2.4.	The set of best practices on cooperation in merger cases	222
3.3.	Use and effectiveness of the above arrangements	222
4.	Are Current/Future Policy Conflicts Manageable Through Voluntary Cooperation/Convergence Alone? and What About the World Beyond the Transatlantic Zone?	224
4.1.	Examples of US–EU policy clashes to date	225
4.1.1.	The Boeing/McDonnell Douglas merger	225
4.1.2.	The GE/Honeywell merger	226
4.1.3.	The Microsoft cases	228
4.2.	The broader global context	230
4.3.	Summary observations	232
5.	Concluding Remarks	234
	References	235

Chapter 8. Transatlantic Regulatory Cooperation on Chemicals — An Idealist’s Dream? 241

1.	Introduction	241
----	------------------------	-----

1.1.	Some figures concerning transatlantic trade and investment in chemicals	243
2.	The Chemical Industry's Input to Regulatory Cooperation: The Race against REACH within a Declining and Re-emerging TABD	248
2.1.	Industry's input to TABD	249
2.2.	Governments' Responses to the New TABD	262
2.3.	New Industry Initiatives Towards Harmonization	264
3.	Regulatory cooperation on chemicals in the context of the Transatlantic Economic Council	265
3.1.	The Transatlantic Summit of 2007 and the Transatlantic Economic Council: The re-emergence of a political will to co-operate	265
3.2.	REACH and cosmetics: A new transatlantic trade war?	269
3.2.1.	Registration of existing substances	270
3.2.2.	REACH and animal tests	271
3.3.	The Globally Harmonized System — Harmonization of classification and labeling of chemicals?	276
3.4.	Cooperation on chemicals within the OECD	279
4.	Conclusions: How to Achieve a Barrier Free Transatlantic Market	281
Chapter 9. Transatlantic Regulatory Cooperation on Accounting Standards: A 'Varieties of Capitalism' Perspective		287
1.	The Puzzle: Successful Transatlantic Regulatory Cooperation on Accounting Standards	287
2.	Convergence in Substantial Terms: A Variety of Capitalism Perspective on Accounting Standards	290
3.	Convergence in Institutional Terms: From National Representation to the Rule of Experts	296

4. The Politics of Transatlantic Convergence on a US Regulatory Model	297
5. The Broader Picture: Towards Global Convergence on the Liberal Regulatory Model?	303
6. Conclusion	308
References	308

Chapter 10. Transatlantic Regulatory Competition and Cooperation in Pharmaceuticals 313

1. Introduction	313
2. Regulatory Differences in the United States and European Union	315
2.1. Snapshot of the US and EU industries	315
2.2. Competitive structure and challenges	316
2.3. Comparative regulatory systems	318
2.3.1. Drug approvals	319
2.3.2. Pricing regulations	321
2.3.3. Intellectual property rights (IPRs)	323
3. Evolution of Regulatory Cooperation	325
3.1. Bilateral regulatory cooperation	325
3.2. Trilateral cooperation: The ICH	327
3.3. Intra-EU coordination	330
3.4. Cooperation in intellectual property rights	334
4. A Concluding Assessment	336
References	337