

Poul Nissen got his PhD from Aarhus University followed by post-doctoral research at Yale University. He set up his independent research having returned to Aarhus and since 2006 he has been a professor of protein biochemistry. His main research interests are transmembrane transport proteins, ribosomes, drug discovery and interdisciplinary approaches in cell biology.