

Dr Linfeng Chen received his BSc degree in modern applied physics (major) and his B.Eng degree in machine design and manufactures (minor) from the Tsinghua University, Beijing, China in 1991, and received his PhD degree in physics from National University of Singapore in 2001. Since 2005, he has been a member of research faculty at the High Density Electronics Center, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville. He is a senior member of IEEE. His research interests mainly include microwave electronics, electromagnetic functional materials, nanomaterials and nanomedicine.